

She sees the mountain
upside down.
With her long hair
sweeping the fallen leaves
she swings
like a pendulum.
From the lagoon at sunset
a hundred sparrows fly away.
Wishing them back
she whistles softly.
And downward
she falls into the sky.

Chungmi Kim | Source: Glacier Lily (Red Hen Press, 2004)